However, it took ten plagues to make the Egyptians willing to let the Israelites go, and it may, for ought we know, take ten such seasons as last winter and this fall to secure such unanimity of sentiment down the river as will finally result in proper aid to the proposed railroad. As long ago as 1836, a far seeing citizen of Cincinnati lifted up his voice in favor of a railroad that would connect Cincinnati with the Southern seaboard. It has taken forty-three years to accomplish what that one man thus early discerned as a geographical necessity to Cincinnati. Today his name is held in high honor by the people of that city. Had he been properly seconded in his day by the people along the line, in the States of Kentucky and Tennessee, his proposed railroad would have paid for itself a dozen times over, in the shape of direct and indirect profits and advantages. The country would have been better developed and the people would have had better markets for all their products, while Cincinnati would have had one-third more people within its limits than it has to-day. To know an opportunity and embrace it was one of the grand maxims of the Seven Wise Men of Greece. How few people, either individually or collectively, know when to take advantage of that tide in their affairs, which, as Shakespeare has said "taken at the flood leads on to fortune," but, omitted, binds "in shallows" all their future efforts.

There is a tide now in the affairs of the people along the routs between here and Parkersburg. If those concerned can only be made to realize it, the much needed railroad, that, had it been built ten years ago, would have added dollars enough to the geographical necessity to Cincinnati. Today his name is held in high honor by

This is not surprising when we remember that it took more than a generation to change the flint-lock muskets of our army into percussion rifles. Time and time again the educated officers of the service pronounced in favor of the flint-locks. Nothing but the inexorable exigencies of experience in the last Indian wars before the rebellion, could modify their opinions, and even at the outbreak of the rebellion there were still those who advocated the flint-locks.

So is it with all such projects as the proposed railroad down the river, through the counties of Marshall, Wetzel, Tyler, Pleasants and Wood. Because the road cannot go to Parkersburg by two or three different and count of the immense amount of capital invested in steam boats would pay dividends, he saw no reason, if economy and honesty was exergised in the management of the railroad, why it would not pay for itself in a few from parties on account of a supposed in the results in the future, and instead of being a drain upon the tax payers, the revenues of the road would flow in and relieve them to the read would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the future and instead of being a drain upon the tax payers, the revenues of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and relieve them to a suppose of the road would flow in and r them. However, it took ten plagues to make deserves. Succonness, Hannen and others and the meeting adjourned, all feeling that the smouldering embers of the river road eventually light Marshall county unto that high road to prosperity which she so justly deserves.

There are those who hold the view that runless we can average ten pounds of pork would have added dollars enough to the market value of their products to have more than paid for itself, will at last be built. If they do not realize it, and if they determine not to give it effective aid, it will die out, and, as in the case of the Cleveland and Pittsburgh road, the project will go to the other side of the river, and then, as Mr. Hubbard said at the McLure House meeting, those of us now advocating it will notlive long enough to see a railroad built slong the West Virginia shore.

The following is the Standay New-Letter's account of the meeting at Moundsville on Saturday:

Mr. Vincent L. Cocksyne was chosen President, and Mr. A. B. Crouch, of the Commercial, Secretary.

Mr. McConnell made a few opening remarks and called upon Judge Cochran, of this city, to address the meeting.

Jüdge Cochran responded in a brief manner to the invitation, and said he was not prepared to make a speech in advocacy of the proposed road, but had left the matter to Mr. A. W. Campbell, while he would confine himself to statistics showing the number of townships, towns and population, and also the estimate of the cost of construction. He said that skirting the Ohio River between Wheeling and Parkersburg, a distance of less than one hundred miles, there are nine another engine, and he and Mr. Henry

Mr. Cockayne stated that Marshall county would engage largely in the business if there were more protection against the ravages of dogs.

Mr. Hudson thought the education of public sentiment was the best means of reaching the desired end. That the politicians were too much in fear of the dog owners to enact any law that would in any way interfere with the constitutional rights of dogs to murder sheep with impunity.
